

Evening Chat

Those Who Have The Least.

Suppose you were a little girl and had only a Dad and he had an "awful" temper and you had to keep house for him, there being no one else. And suppose one day—after you had hidden the revolver from him a dozen times at least, he got hold of it and shot a man. And then—suppose you had been taken away from the only home you knew because it wasn't a fit place for you to grow up in and after a long, long time under the care of kind strangers, you came to realize, even though you were not yet ten years old, that dear old Dad was wrong in spite of all wish on your part to think otherwise. There is a little girl like that in this city—who now has no one in the world all her own but Dad in jail. Yesterday when told about her father and where he was—though expecting something quite different the youngster replied hotly: "Well, it serves him right. I've hidden that revolver many a time."

Isn't it odd that sometimes mere youngsters know so much. Not odd either considering what they experience before they are anywhere near half grown. As I grow older I am wondering if children do not turn out better often times when they have the least aid. I see so many boys and girls struggling along as best they can, forming opinions early on life and character, studying and working hard. While on the other hand I know by hearsay, through writings and personally, thousands who go through life petted darlings perhaps, loved—ah yes! But never accomplishing anything really out of the ordinary. Viewed selfishly we don't want our children to do more perhaps than live honestly and happily. But the world cries for men and women to help bring order out of the chaos of present unrest. And it always has been and will be so in the future, that the child who is driven by unfortunate or unlovely circumstances, and has a germ of character and an ounce of brain to begin with, is invariably the man or woman who has force enough within him to do dynamic things for the good of the universe. He wins through genuine ability without a bit of nonsense about it.

Oh You Green Pantalotti!

The wind blew so hard yesterday that it blew many a green silk pantlette down Main street. Not that any body minded very much at that.

As Told To Me.

Wonder if there'll be any trouble in the city over a little fun in the paper hanging game now in progress. You know some paper hangers are charging $1.50 an hour and it requires, according to their report, about eight hours to do one room. While there are other paper hangers working day and night who are hanging paper for sixty cents a roll. Count up the difference saved for the housewife. Now what I want to know is this: Will they continue to charge $1.50 an hour in the face of the smaller charge? Will there be those who will prefer to pay the $1.50? Will the $1.50 man get cankerous after while and feel like coming in and pulling the sixty cent man off his job by the cuff of the neck? Or will everybody stay peaceful and law abiding and abide by what is? Will what is stay is? Now I wonder.

The Eyes of Youth.

If you want to see something out of the ordinary go to "Eyes of Youth" playing in movie form in the city. Wouldn't it be nice if we could look into the crystal of our souls and see just what will happen if we make certain decisions in life. To see it before hand would be most helpful though quite out of the ordinary. This is the text of the story portrayed in "Eyes of Youth" and so fascinating is it that one truly believes he may see his life spread out before him if he but looks hard enough. The central character has difficulty on deciding which of three pathways to take into the future. One means staying at home with her family and filling a dead mother's place because duty seems to call. The other means an operatic career with all the glory and dabble and money which usually comes to a genius, plus some other things not so nice. The last meant marrying the man she loved even though he was poor. Through the crystal brought by a stranger from the East she sees all three lives quite plainly—in sickness, ugliness and charm. The operatic career brings disgrace and ruin with it's beautiful clothes and jewels. The "duty" call brings little happiness—means useless sacrifice and the spoiling of a sister and brother. So the love call was chosen and without money in great amount the dazzling two eyes of youth belonging to a very human, lovable person, sought the rarest of happiness in the arms of the man she loved.

MILLIONAIRE OIL MAGNATE IS OUTWITTED BY LOCAL MAN

J. C. Arnolds Obtain for a Trifling Sum Asset for Which Millionaire Offered a Million

J. C. Arnold, printer and linotype operator, formerly employed in this city, has as he says, the distinction of putting one over on the country's richest oil magnate. In an interview Mr. Arnold tells the full details in a most interesting manner.

"About a year and a half ago," says Mr. Arnold, "I began having attacks of stomach trouble, which continued getting worse until my liver and kidneys were so affected that I was forced to quit work. I had been working night shift on an Akron paper and was taking medicine continually. One doctor and then another suggested a remedy I tried on some one recommended the formula R-11. By this time I had up hope but began taking formula A-11 because I was guaranteed and if it was good I could get my money back. I had no confidence in it or anything else. Imagine my surprise when after taking about half the first bottle my condition began to improve. I continued taking it and before finishing the third bottle I was completely restored. I am again working and feel better than I have for many years."

"The Reese Formula R-11," continued Mr. Arnold, "cost me a dollar and a quarter a bottle, and considering the fact that a millionaire oil magnate offered a million dollars for a relief from stomach trouble I think I am some financier."

"But, then, people don't think they can get relief unless it is expensive. All I can say is that it only cost one dollar and twenty-five cents, the price of the Reese formula R-11, to relieve stomach trouble, for my case has proven it."

The Reese Formula R-11 is sold by all druggists in Fairmont and surrounding cities and is being demonstrated at Crane's drug store. Drop in and talk it over with the Reese Formula man.—Adv.

To Have Delegate From This Nation

For the first time in its history the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, which is to hold its eighth congress in Geneva, Switzerland, June 6-12, will be attended by an official representative of the United States Government. President Wilson has appointed Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, to represent the United States in official capacity.

At former meetings, countries wherein women have full suffrage have had national and official representatives appointed to the congress by their governments; Australia, New Zealand and Norway, in particular, having been represented in official capacity. The fact that the United States is to have its official representative indicates the depth of the conviction among suffragists that this country will be in the full suffrage list by June.

The International Woman Suffrage organizations of thirty-one countries, new organizations having been admitted from Argentina, Uruguay, Greece and Spain since the Armistice. A very significant meeting is expected, with some twenty-nine or more countries represented. A delegation is scheduled to come from Ukraine.

Burmese Fisheries.
At auctions of leases of government fisheries in Burma only Burman fishermen or their descendants are allowed to bid. This rule, in force for fifty years, limits competition and keeps speculators from raising the price of fish, the food of millions.

How Ladies Improve Looks.

"Many ladies, old and young, suffer a round of torture with their nerves, and many are so frail, thin and bloodless that their splendid features are lost sight of, while a vain attempt to conceal the angularity of the figure deceives no one but themselves. Anger really excites the pity or ridicule of the world," said a well known largely employed practicing physician, in a recent lecture at a young ladies' college. "I do not mind exposing a little secret of mine to all such, as it can do no harm and may result in much happiness and health. It is simply this: Any thin, bloodless, nerve-tortured man or woman can become as fit as the fittest by taking regularly for several months an easily obtained pharmaceutical product known by the profession and pharmacists as three-grain hypophosphoric tablets, put up in sealed packages with directions for home use."
